Set over against the statue of Cromwell—stern, Goo-fearing, righted at last in the syes of England and the world—stands the graven image of the dissolute Charies and the counterfeit presentment of him who was the worst of all the Suarts, boor, rilserable James, faces the stern features of his conqueror. The marble figure of the pure and true and tender Jean d'Arc smiles, as she never would have smiled in life in such company, opposite the bust of the most dissolute and disgusting wretch that ever bore the name of Louis. King of France.

So the world of nations, the same old world of all time, honors alike saint and sinner, blood-thirsty warrior, or tender-hearted, true-souled patriots, since to her fickle heart they have in some way endeared themselves or in her opinion made them worthy of remembrance.

We meet to-night to inveil the features of one whose life-too brief-was but the plain, every-day life of a plain, simple-minded, honest man. He came and went among his people nothing much above the ordinary-a gailant soldler, a correct, upright business-man, a faithful friend, a good Mason, loved, honored, respected by the warm circle of those who knew him well, but never knew until death had almost set its seal upon his lips the great purpose that was ever brooding in his heart, and which will keep his name dear to all Masons to the end of time.

Alexander G. Babcock. In the long, long years to come, when the names of those of us who meet here to-night are but faintly marked lines upon yellow and decaying registers, and when our features will have forever passed from the sight or remembrance of men, this portrait will need no scroll to explain the reason of its existence or to recall the name of him whose face is here pictured. The voices of little children—the aweetest, tenderest, truest of all earthly voices—will throughout the long centuries learn to lisp and love his name, as from the home his beneficence first founded they come to bear witness of his thought and love for them.

The Masons of Virginia, who owe to him, under God, the greatest charity they have ever maintained, will place his name high in that roll of worthies which began with Hiram, and in our own State holds Washington and John Marshall in letters of gold.

I would not have you think me extravagant. Nor would I, by placing in juxtaposition with his the names of these illustrious Masons and Virginians, have you believe that I unduly elevate him or lower them.

And yot I jove to think that sometimes they may come backgrown the sometimes when the inconse of prayer has purified our sin-tainted ether, and the boliness of some great deed has made the ground indeed a holy ground, when from the heart sacred and precize memories exale, driving away all that is buse and unholy and impure: then it may be that those who were once ours, and now are God's, return for a moment to touch us with the wafting of an angelic wing and strengthen us with an influence of a sacred presence. If such a moment can be given to earth, it seems to me that in each recurring year the time will come to us, when we, my brethren, gather at the home this man founded, and the little children his fostering care has aided us to keep from suffering and want answe, once trooping in, singing the praise of that God who of all gods is the only one who has told us that of such as these is the kingdom of Heaven; then, methinks, an unseen company will come fathers and mothers, friends and beloved ones now "beyond the volces," and with them God may permit this man, our (parted brother, to see what he has done for his kind, and hear the sweet voices of the little ones he loved—these little ones, a logacy to care for and keep, O Musons of Virginia, remember well—legacy to keep, to cherich, to guard and foster as long as orphans are in the world, and until the eternal fatherhood of God-has made this earth the kingdom of the Lord and of His Christ.

Miss Collins Not Engaged to Depew. Miss Collins Not Engaged to Depew.

NEW YORK, December 4.—An announcement made yesterday by Clarence Lyman Collins that there is absolutely no truth in the frequently repeated rumors of the engagement of his daughter. Miss Edith Lyman Collins, to her guardian, the Hon Chauncey M. Depew, was shown to Mr. Depew, and Mr. Depew declared that the statement was correct, and said that he had been the guardian of Miss Collins in money matters since she was 3 years of age, and that he is also a trustee, under the will of her grandmother, Mrs. Nivens, and that the return intimacy growing out of these relations and his admiration for his ward had led to reports of their engagement.

Mrs. William Rickey, of New York, araccompanied by her husband, who is on a business trip through the South.

Mrs. Rickey is more familiarly known to the medical, scientific, and art world as Adele Marte Graef, and she is chiefly distinguished as being the exponent of a new science which she calls "manimorphology," in pursuit of which she visits hospitals, insane asylums, and penitentiaries.

Manimorphology, says Mrs. Rickey, is the science of art and moral and physical anatomy, and by its means she is able to read in the hand the whole human being mentally, morally, and physically. It has nothing to do with palmistry, but is merely a diagnosis of present conditions, mental and physical.

Rickey learned of the interest aroused in the case of the two boys, Fouchee and Jerdan, now in Henrico county jail, charged with the murder of Mr. Tinsley, the Laurei Reformatory guard. The plea of insanity, which has been set up in defence of Fouchee's act attracted her attention, and she determined to apply Rickey stated, that there are no traces of insanity in either of the boys' hands, but Fouchee was, she thinks, under the control of the other boys, and was imselled to the act without realizing what pelled to the act without realizing what he was doing. In her opinion, the mentality of the boy is such that while he is not an imbecile he was not morally responsible for what he did.

Mrs. Rickey has lectured before the Anthropological Society and the Social Culture Society, of New York, and is now preparing a book for publication which will embody the results of her interesting logistications. She has been pursuing this study for many years. Her father was a distinguished professor of anatomy and hygiene in Berlin, and she is herself a graduate in medicine.

Sharkey is resting easily to-day, and will be on the street within a week. Another leading physician, who inspected the "sailor," is of the opinion that Sharkey was "doped" with loding to bear out Earp's claim of foul.

INTERESTING COMPLICATIONS.

Suppose the Laurada Enters a Spanish Port-Then What?

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 4.— Interesting international complications are expected if the American steamship Laurada enters the port of Valencia,

It is asserted in other quarters that the Laurada was sent out of American waters some time ago to avoid the possibility of being libelied by the United States Government for her connection with Cuban filibustering. It is even hinted that her orders to proceed to Valencia are in pursuance of a deliberate purpose to bring about a rupture between the United States and Spain. The strained relations between the people of the two countries would result, it is feared, in undue importance being given to such a proceeding, and the hope is therefore, expressed that the vessei will not be ordered to enter a Spanish port.

VESSEL WILL BE SEIZED.

PHILADELPHIA. PA., December 4.—
It is said that Secretary-of-State Olney has cabled to Madrid the facts in regard to the steamship Laurada, but the vessel, it is reported here, will be seized on a civil process by the Spanish Govgroment, when she reaches Valencia, and a suit will be brought for forfeiture against her because of having landed armed military expeditions, dynamite, and war material within three miles of the coast of Cuba, in the jurisdiction of Spain. VESSEL WILL BE SEIZED.

Captain Hughes left the vessel at Messina to-night, and was succeeded in command by Captain Lapsley, his chief officer, who was formerly master of the British steamship Czarina. The latter has never been mixed up with filibustering expeditions.

It is likely that the vessel will remain at Messina until the Department of State decides it is safe for her to proceed. The charterers of the vessel demand that she shall proceed, according to the terms of her charter, as the cargo, which is of a perishable character, is a waiting of her charter, as the cargo, which is of a perishable character, is awaiting her at Valencia, and will seize her if she does not comply with the agreement on her return to the United States.

The Spanish warship Hernandez left Gibraltar to-night to assist the authorities in preserving order in Valencia, so bitter is said to be the feeling already worked up against the Laurada.

Dockmen's Strike Extending.

Editress Cowhides Editor.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., December 4.—A special to the Advertiser from Attala, Ala., says: This afternoon Miss Emma Monroe, the 15-year-old editress of the Attala Beacon, met William H. Cather, editor of the Attala Herald, on the street, and cowhided him. Miss Monroe's father has had trouble about a shortage of funds while he was Treasurer of De Kalb county, but the courts have not been able to decide as to his being a defaulter. An editorial in the Herald this week reflected on Mr. Monroe in that connection, and his daughter resented it by using a horsewhip on her brother editor. Cather ran up a stairway, and escaped heavy punishment.

I wish to say to the theatre-going people of Richmond that they will make no mistake in going to see Hoyt's "Midnight Bell" on next Monday and Tuesday nights and Tuesday matinee. This is the best piece ever written by Mr. Hoyt, and with Digby Bill, Laura Joyce Bell, and a first-class company, I have no hesitation in guaracteeing the excellence of the performance. There will be no better attraction of its kind in Richmond this season. Prices will not be advanced.
